Training that works

Gas Courses for 'Gas Safe' registration

To support the development of you or your employees' skills to meet the constantly changing Plumbing and Gas Industry and the needs of your organisation. Gas Foundation and ACS Gas Safety courses are available at The Warrington Business School.

What are these gas courses?

These are full cost courses to enable people to work legally on domestic gas systems in the UK.

Why are they different?

There is a strict 'Category of Candidate' list prior to sitting any ACS Gas Safety Assessment.

You would need to be at level 1 or 2 on the list to progress. Successful Gas Foundation candidates become a Category 2 candidate on completion and may then do the extra training and assessment at ACS (Accredited Certification Scheme) level.

Why should business get involved?

It is a legal requirement for operatives to hold the ACS Gas Safety Certificate to work on domestic installations. Business's may prefer to send one or two operatives every 5 years to be re-assessed on the ACS and rely on other operatives to support them with some of the work.

The Gas Foundation is designed for these operatives who work under supervision, to fast track to the same registration status without the need for sitting a traditional 2 year Level 2 programme in Plumbing or Gas first. It is not however designed for novices in the industry but would benefit any business allowing more staff to legally sign off installation work.

What does it involve?

The programme runs for up to 30 weeks on day release or two evenings per week prior to a 2 week block training and assessment course and is delivered at Warrington Collegiate in our new modern facilities. Further assessments will take place on site as necessary and in liaison with your current 'Gas Safe Registered' supervisor. Employers will be informed of the operatives progress throughout their programme.
