

The Warrington
Business School
Training that works

Automotive Studies

To support the development of your employees' skills to meet the constantly changing automotive repair industry and the needs of your organisation. The Warrington Business School offers courses from Foundation to Advanced Apprenticeships, and bespoke short courses to support your organisation and to meet legislative requirements.

Why do your employees need training?

Vehicles have complex systems that require periodic maintenance and repairs, skills gaps that may exist can be addressed to develop staff knowledge and competence. New legislation is being introduced that requires staff in your organisation to be trained.

Who should do this training?

All employees who have basic or no qualifications aged 16 years and above, or who require updates of prior qualifications.

What's involved?

Apprenticeships are delivered over one or two years. Employees are assessed in the workplace and attend college for 1 day per week. Short courses vary from one to five days to suit operational requirements.

What type of training is available?

- Foundation Apprenticeships
- Advanced Apprenticeships
- Unit qualification awards
- Mobile Air Conditioning
- ATA

Why choose us as your training provider?

We are an approved training provider for City & Guilds Automotive qualifications. All Warrington Business School staff are highly qualified with recent trade backgrounds and hold vast experience within the automotive repair industry.
